

Child Star Makes His Debut In Film 'Tomorrow The World'

Skippy Homeier, magnificent child star, makes his screen debut in "Tomorrow, the World," opening Thursday at the State theatre. A daring and hard-hitting film, it deals with problems which develop when a Nazi-trained youth arrives in the United States and proceeds to try out his totalitarian doctrines on a middle-class American family.

Heralded by those who know their books as a fine piece of work, "Valley of Decision," now in film form, is at the Ohio theatre. The film stars Gregory Peck and Greer Garson in roles with Academy Award potentialities.

The Quilna theatre is currently showing two features, "The Sullivans" with Anne Baxter and Thomas Mitchell and "Home In Indiana." Both pictures have that element which puts them in the top rank.

There's a barrel of fun in store for you at the Sigma theatre in the newest Hollywood production "Having A Wonderful Crime," starring Pat O'Brien, George Murphy and Carole Landis. The story is about a man who forced himself in on a newly-married couple when they went on their honeymoon—but everything ends happily—the movies, you know.

Playing its last day at the Lyric theatre, "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" will bow out Wednesday night as "Kid Sister" and "Mystery Man" come in for a three-day stand.
