Corn in Most of State Good

If Frost Holds Off Crop Can Mature

Damaging frosts have been reported in Florence, Vilas, and Langlade counties and temperatures throughout the state aver aged 1 to 2 degrees below normal for the past week, the federal weather bureau at Milwaukee announced today in its weekly crop summary.

However, if frosts hold off in the rest of the state until Oct. 1, much corn now in the milk stage will mature, Weather Forecaster Howard J. Thompson predicted. He added that the crop continues the state, although its progress toward maturity doubtless was delayed by cool nights, Corn was poorest in the northern section, and Thompson said it was doubtful that the cron there would be discussed that the cron there would licensed" tayern.

Showers on Friday and Tuesday averaged about one-half inch for the state, and soil moisture was said to be sufficient for good crop growth. Farmers of several areas were doing their fall plowing, but in the Green Bay area it was said to be too dry.
