Fans Get New Romantic Duo In Quilna's Picture Friday

Since film fans always grab, a new romantic team, which clicks with them and scream for more, this reviewer may as well prophesy right now that Rosalind Russell and Lee Bowman will be seen again together after their portrayals in the new comedy, "Sne Wouldn't Say Yes" opening at the Quilna theatre Friday.

Of course, it's nothing new for each of these stars to give a topnotch comedy performance. Miss Russell has been doing it for years and Lee Bowman came into is own in "Impatient Years" and

"Tonight and Every Night." In the film, Rosalind is a brilliant psychiatrist, who, when attempting to cure a South American dancer (Adele Jergens) of her comple of kissing men-she thinks her kisses kill them - discovers, thru Lee Bowman, and thru Nixie, his cartoon creation, that she herself is inhibition-ridden.

A PT boat may have a fascinating sound to some, but to others, grim reality rears its head when this type of vessel is mentioned. In the days just before the fall of Bataan, almost everyone will remember the news that was flashed back to the United States that General MacArthur had left the island with his family to seek safer quarters in Australia.

The words, "I'll Be Back," will always remain in the minds of those who were left there. Now, in the film, "They Were Expendable," at the Ohio theatre, you'll see this history-making story of the transportation of MacAithur from Bataan and the heroic battle of the men who manned the PT boats in dangerous waters.

A swashbuckling story of piracy on the high seas, "Captain Kidd." starring Charles Laughton, will make its debut at the Sigma theatre Saturday.

Captain Kidd's was one of the most spectacular careers of a gaudy era. The most picturesque villain who ever brandished a cutlass or buried stolen treasure, it is surprising that Hollywood has not brought him to the screen be- State Director Announces Disfore.
