Postwar Shortages Bring Top Prices: Government Seeks Curb

LONDON, Aug. 24-(INS)-Britain's black market is worse than ever today.

Continued shortages of many essential commodities and increasing demands has led to a more rapid turnover in the black market with prices mountaing higher and higher.

 The black market in England is now organized on a national scale with regional directors in contact with one another for quick transfers of surpluses and also for meeting demands of specific commodities in given areas.

Whether or not a black market "general" coordinates and controls al lthese local chiefs is a matter for conjecture. But local chiefs are very strong, lead big organizations and hide behind their operators who dispose of the big hauls in smaller quantities. The operators refuse to talk when caught because the local king-pins look after their families when they go to jail and provide jobs for them upon their release.

Investigators insist that organization has so improved in black market operations that each commodity has its own special group of operators.

One ministry of food investigator stated that "tens of thousands" of people are living today solely on the black market, which is located initially in bulk suppliers and passed on in a variety of ways by personal introduction, and often by methods of deception peculiar to the black marketeer, including failure to cancel coupons or points that should have been used."

The big men do the most damage but the composite of small reousness of the situation.
