Better Truax Bus Need Told

Veterans Explain Long Walk to Homes

Five veterans and veterans' wives Friday afternoon told the Public Service Commission (PSC) the importance of better bus service to their homes in the housing project on Truax Field, set up by the Madison Housing Authority

Two said they would be willing to pay a dime—twice the fare now in effect with Madison Bus Co.- to get service extended from the gate entering the field off E. Washington ave. into the field .7

They said they kept over-age cars in operation because carrying small children and beavy loads of groceries as much as a mile from the present bus turn-around was "just too much."

They pointed out that in many cases the wife was unable to get out to shop during the day, to make trips to doctors or dentists, or see her friends, because the long walk could not be managed with a small child or two.

Petitioners Testify

One of the requirements of those occupying the 150 units opened by MHA late in 1946 was that the couple have one or more children.

Those testifying in the day-long hearing were Thomas J. Schwartz, one of the early signers on the petition to the PSC; John Heronemus; Paul F. Osmundson; Gerhardt Schuler, and Mrs. Robert W.
