By WILLIAM MCKENNEY

Today's hand comes from that outstanding Life Master, Harry J. Fishbein of the Mayfair Bridge Club in New York. Fishbein is always patient with the novice and answers questions willingly.

When the dummy goes down, declarer can see that he has a possible spade loser, a certain heart and diamond loser, and two club losers—probably five losers which he wants to reduce to three.

After winning the opening heart lead, West shifts to the queen of clubs.

The opening lead has marked West with the ace of hearts, and he undoubtedly has some other strength for his vulnerable bid. In all likelihood he has the king of diamonds.

Fishbein points out that north-south has:

Bridge hand diagram showing cards in each hand and a list of cards held by each player.

ing is to be gained by winning the first club trick. Let West hold it, and when he continues with a club, declarer wins this in dummy with the ace and leads a spade. East plays the queen and South wins.

Now he wants to try to establish the diamond suit. Figuring West for the king of diamonds and possibly the queen also, declarer leads the ten of diamonds.

When West plays the queen, South lets him hold the trick, hoping that he originally had only two clubs.

The only thing West can do safely now is to lead a spade. Declarer wins, leads the other diamond, and when West plays the six-spot, the finesse of the jack is taken. Then the king of spades and ace of diamonds are cashed, and the losing clubs are thrown on dummy's diamonds.

Thus five losers are reduced to three.

AURAL QUIZ

THIS HAPPENED when Herbert G. Geisler, blind alderman, was taking a psychology course at the University of Chicago.

Geisler was allowed to bring his portable typewriter for a "yes-no" quiz. When the professor paused after reading each question, the class listened to the typewriter go "bang, bang, bang," or "bang, bang." The students wrote "yes," or "no." That's why the class was extremely bright that day—Magazine Digest.

Depends on the point of view!

SEEN FROM THE OUTSIDE, a well-lighted home delivers a message. What it says depends on who receives it.

To the family and to friends it says "Welcome", reflecting a warmth and cheer they can feel before the door is opened.

To thieves and prowlers, who work best in the dark, it says "Keep Out. This is no place for you!"

So the outside of your house will say whatever you prefer. Good indoor and outdoor lighting provides both an invitation and a warning. Depends entirely on the point of view.

As Spoken in Virginia

IN HIS INAUGURAL address at the University of Virginia, President Colgate W. Darden made reference to "Mr. Jefferson," thereby showing himself a true-blue son of his alma mater. University of Virginia men usually refer to their patron saint in that fashion, just as they speak of their "law" and their "grounds"—not their "campus."

There are a number of such local usages which make good sense to Virginians but which baffle outsiders. "The Beach" to most natives means Virginia Beach; "the University" refers to the institution at Charlottesville; "the Ho" is Virginianese for the resort in Warren Springs Valley; and "the High School," to its loyal "old boys," is the Episcopal High School, Alexandria.
