But in our opinion the greatest significance of this study is to open new doors to the enormous potentialities of atomic energy for peacetime

A great bottleneck in tanning this potential is the shortage of trained scientists who know how trained scientists who know now to handle the basic ingredient. The commission aims at relieving this shortage by providing continuous fellowship funds suf-ilicient to attract capable men not only to deal with health haz ards but also to accomplish basic research.

Necessary emphasis on the military aspects of atomic energy has relegated to second place its development as a source of power. However one peacetime application of atomic facilitate exploration of these possibilities. For example, through the use of isotopes whose radiations are detectable by instruments, it is possible to trace the course of substances through plants and through the thuman body.

This fact alone has enormous implications for research in such diseases as cancer as well as in unlocking the secrets of plant energy. From the philosophical standpoint, the really important meaning of expanded work in this direction is that it represents an effort to harness the giant of atomic energy for constructive social good in the tremendous race we are running with the forces of destruction

Civilized man will hope that this approach which stresses the virtually limitiess benefits of atomic energy to mankind may prove to be the most effective way of preventing the consumption of the world by atomic bombs.—Washington Post.

BETTER THAN MEN?

Answer to Question No. 1
Yes. The main reason, however, is women on the average, are not as aggressive, dominating and ambitious as men. Furthermore, partly due to women's nature, but largely to their environment, girls are taught to be in-terested in bables, home, clothes, etc. No doubt these acquired hab-its tend to prevent them from taking to crime

I own an extremely clever painting of high technical skill but the artist could never be a great painter because he lacks rich, creative intelligence. Fsychologist Carl Seashore shows, by his measurements of musical talent that a person can be a clever planist or violinist, yet never be a composer for the same reason. Answer to Question No. 3

No. Tests of 10,000 children, age 8 to 14, showed the "bad" children had, on the average, as much "moral knowledge" and knew just as well as the "good" children what was right and wrong. Philosopher John Dewey said, the mere idea of honesty or purity does not necessarily mean you will be either honest or pure. It is useless to leach children right and wrong unless we rouse the desire and habit of doing the right and avoiding the wrong.

MCKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY

WHEN the annual meeting of When the annual meeting or the board of directors of War Orphans Scholarships, Inc., was held in Washington recently, I was extended the honor of being re-elected president. We have already granted scholarships to 50 children whose fathers were killed in action in the last year.

The secretary of the organilast year. The secretary of the organization, Albert H. Morehead, was unable to attend the meeting, so on the way back from Washington I talked to him by train telephone, and he started to discuss this bridge hand, which involves a safety play the average, player and the expert miss. The whole question is how to play frum.

whole question is how to play trump.

West cashes the first three heart tricks and then shifts to a dismond, which declarer with swith the king. Now almost invariably a declarer with this holding will lead a small spade to finesse dummy's queen, and the contract is lost.

Morehead pointed out that the correct safety play when holding 10 trumps is to lead the jack from the South hand, and if West fails to cover, take the the king declarer should go up with dummy's ace.

When East shows out, South returns to his hand and leads the nine of spades. Thus he picks up all three trumps without losing a trick.

WORD ON HATS

SOMETHING called the Hat Research Foundation decrees that men hereafter will wear a "scoop" hat, described as a snap brim felt model with a 2% inch brim.

Beyond noting that it is this sort of thing that can keep the, hatless craze going, we are happy to know of the Foundation which, since it speaks for an industry to the public, is doubtless in a position to convey the public's respects back to the Industry.

in a position to convey see goalie's respects back to the industry.

If this be so, let it pass the word along that we would appreciate some of that prewar felt, with substance and character, that didn't shrink a half size in the cleaning—and don't tell us the war killed off all the rabbits or whatever the heasts that provided that lovely stuff, for the war was miles from the areas they infest.

If the Foundation is to rule as to shapes, it is only right that the clustomers have something to say about what goes into a hat. Otherwise he may do as proper Bostonians do: Settle on one hat early in ille, and thereafter maintain an aloof attitude toward foundations and the uncertainties of changing state. We Gladly Break a Tradition

For more than 16 years the Richfield Reporter has been heard throughout the West at a traditional hour - 10 r.m. At this time-six nights a week ... 52 weeks a year ... year in and year out-radio dials in hundreds of thousands of Western homes swing to one program—the Richfield Reporter. Thousands of young people have heard the Reporter as long as they can remember. Millions of adults have kept pace with the times through the clear unbiased reporting of America's Oldest Newscast

In breaking its 10 o'clock tradition, the Richfield Reporter gladly cooperates in a move to meet a state-wide emergency. After April 25-when radio network schedules will be adjusted to Daylight Saving Time-the Richfield Reporter again will be heard at 10 o'clock.

Meanwhile - at the new hour - the Reporter will continue to chronicle the news fairly and accurately for the millions of Westerners to whom the Richfield Reporter stands-"First in Public Service."
