(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK-Post-war competition has hit the radio industry full force.

You call up a manufacturer and ask if the falling prices in the industry mean that it is headed for a depression. He replies with an emphatic no.

Then he starts calling his competitors names, admits confiden-tially that he plans a few cheaper models himself, and says that the radio industry is setting a pattern of what to do when supply catches up with demand: give the public something new and cut prices to create new markets.

There are now 17 television stations operating, construction permits have been granted for 71 more, and applications are pending on 133 TWO. A spokesman for RCA Victor says that the industry expects 10,000 frequency modula-tion broadcasting stations to be in operation this year. All major manufacturers are out to sell their share of FM receiving sets.

THREE. A spokesman for Ben-dix said "there's a tremendous lot of merchandise on the shelves." Retailers Shy Large retail chains told the United Press that they were stocking home receiving sets on a hand-to-mouth basis to keep from being caught in any price war when new models hit the market. One buyer said "several of the major manufacturers have been dumping current models through chain outlets to clear the way for their new, improved models. They
