Radar to Blanket U.S.

man element out of the air radar machinery dotting the science of electronics to work was outlined in proposals prepared for President Truman's air co-ordinating committee. After eight months of study, the Radio Technical Commission for Aeromautics has recommended the expenditure of $1,113,000,000 to blanket the nation with a radar net for the automatic control of civil and military aircraft in all weather. If the commission's proposals are acted on favorably by Congress, the shape of aeronautical things to come will be significantly altered.

As anyone knows who has spent hours in a commercial air liner "stacked up" over an air port waiting for the weather to clear, the traffic problem on the airways is a real and growing one. Under the program outlined by the commission every plane in the sky throughout the station would be visible, regard.

are not liked, and we try to show No, unless it is extreme. It is off and win people by clothes,

By Gene Byrnes

No. Poor and oppressed people never organize anything for their betterment because they are too weak. All revolutionary movements are organized either by a few of the middle and upper middle classes who have gained little power, education and or else by gangaters auch as Hitler, Mussolini and the present revolutionary Communists in France and Italy.

Answer to Question No. 3

No. Children are not afraid of animals unless they make a lot of noise, such as a dog barking or else some animal that has hurt them. Children develop fears of animals because other people teach them to be afraid, or they are not introduced to them gradually and gently without loud noises, or allowing the animal to upset or injure them. Children would walk up and pet a lion if they had not been taught to be afraid of it.

EXECUTIVES whose business takes them around the country often try to plan itineraries to coincide with tournaments. Charles Groden of New York, whose company is a style concern, saw to it that he was in St. Paul, Minn., this year to defend the pair championship at the St. Paul Winter Carnival Tournament, which he and Peter Leventritt won last year. They successfully defended the title.

Today's hand is one that helped Groden to become a twotime champion. Experienced tournament players do often redouble a contract, but Leventritt considered this one an excep-
