Q. How does a chantey differ rom other folk songs?—

E. M. M.

A. The chantey differs from others in that the rhythm is of much more importance than the words. Chanteys were originally used to help a group of seamen to work in unison on a windlass or a line where united effort was necessary. A leader or chanteyman usually sang half of a couplet and the whole group joined in on the chorus.

Q. Where is Mt. Ararat?—

D. G.

A. This traditional site of the landing of Noah's Ark is on the border between Turkey and Iran, near Soviet Armenia. There is also a mountain by this name, 2043 feet high, in Eldorado County, California. It is just north of Coloma, on the South Fork of the American River, where gold was discovered at Sutter's Mill a century ago.

Q. What is the daily protein requirement for each person in planning meals?—S. O. P.

A. The daily protein requirement for a person weighing 150 grams or approximately ounces. Protein is a constituent of meat, eggs, milk cheese and cereal foods and is necessary for the growth and repair of the body.

Q. Is it possible for an American student in England to work his way through college?—
J. M. M.
A. It is not possible for a student to work his way through college in England. For permission to work during vacations he must apply to the Ministry of Labour.

MCKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By WILLIAM E. MCRENNEY

Today's lesson hand comes from one of the cleverest little bridge books it has been my pleasure to read, "You Too Can Play Bridge," by Mary Flasher bridge editor of the Columbus. (Ohio) Citizen. It's only 40 pages including rules, yet it covers every phase you need to know.

constantly is counting your tricks, a subject Mrs. Flasher handles well in the hand shown today.

In regard to the opening lead, her simple statement is excellent: "West on lead should lead a heart, since the bidding indicated that the opponents have no losers in that suit, and West may reserve his honor cards in the hope of capturing tricks as the play develops."

the play develops."

Now we come to declarer's problem, and Mrs. Flasher says: "South, the declarer, looks over his prospects to take home his ton tricks. If he cashed all his hearts and his spade ace, he would have six tricks. He needs four more, so he must use his trumps separately by ruffing."

Therefore the first, trick is won by declarer with the ace of hearts and a small club is led toward dummy's king. If West plays low, declarer should play the king from dummy. However, West probably would go up with the ace of clubs and lead another heart. This is won in dummy and the eight of diamonds led toward South's king. East would win this trick with the ace and probably return a spade.

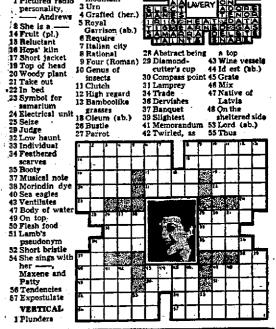

Now see how simple it is to develop the hand into ten tricks.

Answer To Question No. 2

True. At social affairs women do this as a matter of tact. Many wives deliberately appear less intelligent than their husbands in order to preserve the husband's feeling of being head of the house. In general, however, men and women are equal in intelligence but their talents and interests lie in different fields.

and interests lie in different fields.

Answer To Question No. 3

If we had an intelligent social order you could do both, As it is, however, youth should never forget to provide for old age. A friend tells his married children, "Remember, every dollar you spend means you are also spending four cents interest you would have had on that dollar each year as long as you live."

Sound advice by a wise man.
