IT WAS back in 1931 that Mrs. P. Hal (Dorothy) Sims sold me the idea of running an individual tournament in which each player would play with every other player as a partner once and as an opponent twice. That year the tournament was made up of 25 players.

.B. Jay Becker's name is recorded on the trophy as the 1937 winner, and in winning it again this year he became the first to win twice.

Today's hand is one that helped Becker win. I believe he was the only player in the room to get to four hearts.

Over East's two-club bid Becker did not bid two hearts, but three hearts, When West went to four clubs and North passed, you might say Hecker was stretching to bid four
