"Girls are advised not to marry a handsome profile — and very properly, we think. There is always the danger that the fellow will turn around.

By Jay Alan

The American parent's credo: If the boy is a dope in school he needs glasses. If, on the other hand, he leads the class it's heredity.

Then there was the great heart specialist who worked himself into prostration spreading the alarm to his middleaged fel-low-citizens, "better slow down!"

The hunt continues for the oft-cited average woman. This would be the one who looks fairly well in the new look.

A survey of magazine titles shows civilization back at the old, busy crossroads. How strange that no cigar-store chain opens a corner branch, for the nervous customer, smoking to customer, smoking to kill the wait.

Some feel any meeting with the Muscovite would be vain, as we simply don't talk the same language. For example, in the bright lexicon of the red on the muscle there is no such expression as "uninstructed delegate."

WHEN I hear one expert compliment another one on the way a hand was played, I get out pencil and paper and go to work because I know the hand was good. Oswald Jacoby com-plimented Tobias Stone for the way he played today's hand at the Cavendish Club in New York City. And when Jacoby pays Stone a compliment, the hand must be really good.

John R. Crawford of Philadelphia was Stone's partner. You may find the bidding somewhat confusing, but that was the way it happened. Jacoby made a rather unusual lead, the jack of clubs. Remember that his opponents were in a slam con-tract. If Stone could have figured that Jacoby had led from a three card club suit, there would have been no play to the hand, but he felt quite sure that Ja-coby had four clubs.

Stone led to dummy's ace of hearts, cashed the heart king, and when Jacoby showed out and when Jacoby showed out, he led the small heart and finessed the ten-spot. Jacoby had to make two discards which were the deuce and four of diamonds. But when Stone led the monds, But when stone led the queen of hearts, Jacoby was squeezed. He discarded the three of clubs, whereupon Stone cashed the club ace and led an-other club which Jacoby won
