Tommy Dorsey brought a swell crew of soloists and a cohesive band to the Parkway theater for two concerts Wednesday night. The customers, not quite enough of them to fill the house both times, rewarded the group with an enthusiastic reception.

The shows ended in a blaze of saxophonic glory with Boomie Richmond riding "Well Git It" through a half-dozen choruses with Dorsey played his famed "Song of India" and "Trombonology" just as you've heard them on records — smoothly and sweetly even in the rapid passages. The audiences, of course, loved them, and with reason.

Another hit with the crowds was "Marie," in which the fiveman trumpet section did the famous Bunny Berigan chorus in honor of the lad who once called board wanderings; Smith's dead-pan funmaking helped it along. Shavers showed off his trumpet Pyrotecnics in "Summertime," and added a vocal of "At the Fat Man's" — despite the fact the microphone wasn't working.
