Answer to Question No. 1

It depends on how seriously each one takes his religion. If they both think their religion offers the only path to heaven, then a happy marriage is well-night impossible. If one takes his religion very seriously and the other is understanding and tolerant, the chances are some-what better. If both are folerant, chances are still better. The hardest hurdle is what religion to teach the children.

Answer to Question No. 2
Certainly. Psychiatrist Neil Dayton found from a study of 90,000 cases that only 1 out of 4 persons admitted to mental hospitals ever came back for further treatment. This indicates about three-fourths—certainly far over half—were cured, or improved enough to return to normal life. There should be no more stigma attached to going to a mental hospital than to any other kind of hospital.

Answer to Question No. 3

other kind of hospital.

Answer to Question No. 3
Yes. Take typhoid. Before we had antitoxins the susceptible strains were rapidly dying out. As the biologists say we "were evolving against it." Now the susceptible are saved (thank heaven) but they marry with the nonsusceptible. Biologists believe this spreads, susceptibity to almost everybody. Thus if we should lose our antitoxins, infectious diseases would likely

By Jay Alan MCKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By WILLAM E. McKENNEY

Bridge teachers tell me that with concentration, anyone can learn how to bid in a reasonably short time, but they agree that the play of the hand is difficult for most people. I can well understand this, because there are no set rules.

Take today's hand, for example. If dummy holds the K 9 7 2, and you hold the A Q 10 5 3, the correct play to keep from losing a trick is to lay down the ace. Then you will be able to finesse either hand cut of the jack.

But that is because you hold the ten-spot. When you are missing the ten, as in today's hand, a study of the situation will show you that you cannot lay down the ace. If the four trumps to the jack-ten are in the West hand, you never can pick them up. And if they are in the East hand, you must first play toward the king.

Declarer wins the opening lead of the club ten with the queen in dummy and cashes the king of spades. When West shows out, South leads dummy's nine of spades. East has to cover with the ten so declarer wins with the queen goes back over to dummy and leads the seven of spades. East covers with the jack and declarer wins with the ace. Now the last trum is picked up and declarer. with the jack and declarer wins with the ace. Now the last trump is picked up and declarer has the balance of the tricks.
