Beekeepers Honor Inventor of Hive

GREENFIELD, Mass. — (U.P.)— One hundred years ago a Congregational minister with a sweet Volk retired 13 years ago, but the tooth invented a "bee space." Now beekeepers throughout the forced him back in business. He nation have erected a plaque in now turns out 100 stogies in the his memory.

The inventor was the Rev. Lorenzo L. Langstroth who devised a hive, shaped like a box, from which racks of honey could be re-moved and empty ones substituted without disturbing the bees Until his invention in 1848 it was almost impossible to remov honey-filled combs without dismantling the hive and destroying the bees. The National Federation Beckeepers Associations says the simple invention made possible commercial production of honey.

eight years ago when he was governor of the state. A widening divergence of views between the two had led observers to consider the possibility.

However, although extending his support to the man he termed "an able and courageous senator," the unsuccessful candidate for the Republican presidential nomination emphasized a hope Ball eventually would change his mind on some issues over which he and Stassen have disagreed.

Stassen also jointed out that "every seat will count" toward piling up a Republican majority in congress to work "with the Republican president.

Stassen's endorsement came after fillings for state and national office closed and the possibility of Gov. Luther Youngdahl's seeking Ball's seat ended with the governor filing for reelection.
