MCKENNEY ON BRIDGE Modest Maidens BY WILLAM E. MCKENNEY

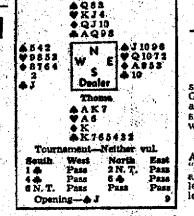

By Dick Turner

One of the most enthusiastic supporters of tournament bridge in Pittsburgh, Pa., is Paul Thoma, who operates a drug store in that city. He has been Bridge Association several times. Whenever there is a tournsment in Pittsburgh, there is always a crowd in Thoma's room after the sessions, going over the hands. When today's hand was discussed, he said that at rubber bridge it should be played at six clubs. But it was played in a duplicate game. Therefore, Thoma felt that when his partner went to six clubs, he had to go to six no trump. I am quite sure that if the hand were played at six clubs, that is exactly what would be made. West would open his fourth best diamond and East would cash the ace. However, at six no trump East could not be criticized for opening the jack of spades, North, of course, won and cashed all of the clubs, discarding the queen jack and ten of diamonds from his own hand.

president of the Pittsburgh

Poor East felt the pinch on the six club discards. He let go. three diamonds, then dropped the six of spades, but he still had to discard the deuce and seven of hearts. North then cashed the king and queen of spades and led the low heart to dummy's ace, East's ten falling. The six of hearts was led back. As the contract was only six, de-clarer did not need the finesse. He went up with the king of hearts, which dropped East's queen, and the lack of hearts was good for the last trick.

THOUGHTS

He sealeth up the hand of every man; that all men may know his work....Job 3717.

HE who bridles the fury of the billows knows also to put a stop to the secret plans of the wicked. Submitting with respect to His holy will, I fear respect to His holy will, I fear God, and have no other fear.—
