CHINA AWAITS NEW CURRENCY

Gold Yuan Use Holds Hope of Better Days

By FRED HAMPSON

SHANGHAI, Aug. 21. (27) China awaited today with mingled feelings the issuance of the new gold yuan Monday. Everyone hoped the 12 yearold inflation which reached its peak after V-J Day would end. Skeptics maintained that the government merely was trying to knock a few zeros off its money and starting over again. But some thought infla-tion might end if the new banknote issue was controlled.
That seemed to be the crux of the problem, For three years Nationalist China has financed its civil war with printing presses. Now, with the nation's fortunes at an alltime low, China is trying to stop the printing presses. How can it pay and feed and keep its armies fighting? -

One large Chinese banker, who is not connected with the government, saw an outside chance for stabilization pro-vided there is an iron resolve at the top level to limit the amount of new money issued. He doubted that the new money had enough backing to be stabilized at four to $1, but thought the line might be held at somewhere around 20 to $1. That will happen only if the printing presses are padlocked,

The Shanghal exchange rate on the old currency fell from 13,000,000 to $1 to 10,500,000 to $1. On the other hand, com-modity prices which leveled off yesterday, jumped today. Thus Chinese national currency in its dying days lost value in relation to commodities, but gained value in relation to foreign currencies.
