Funnymen Have to Learn Selt-Detense

By .VIRGINIA MACPHERSON (United Press Hollywood Currespondent

HOLLYWOOD-Ever since Milton Berle squelched a penny-tossing heckler with: "There's only one animal that throws a scent!" nightclub entertainers have been trying to top it.

They get a lot of practice in

Out here the customers may be either tourists in their cups of frustrated actors dead set to ove they can be just as funny as the guy up there at the mike.

The Waiter Helpod

Things get so rough one martini-guzzling native even tried to outyell Spike Jones. Spike had a waiter toss a loaded tray at his feet. Everybody thought it was part of the act.

Bob Hope came closest to Cerle's stopper. He quieted a heckler with: "Please, I've only got 10 minutes to come out here and prove I'm a shmoe . . . you've got all night."

If the guy comes back for more Hope leers at the audience, "when he was born something terrible happened. He lived."

Things have progressed to a point now where no veteran nightclub comedian would dare set one foot in the spotlight without memorizing a long list of insults. You Gotta Be Fast

He might take a chance and ad lib his way through a joke. But when a hiccupping voice bawls out: "Who told you you were funny, mister? Get losht!" He's got to have his answer ready. And if he's a brand new comic he needs more than insults. Like Roger Price. He tried 'em all before he got his big idea.

Price used to write gags for Hope. After years of making him funny he decided to see if the customers would laugh at the same lines coming out of somebody else's mouth.

"Darned if they don't," Price "But the hecklers used to rattle me. I tried all the old bromides, like: 'He's an example of the club's policy, the customer is always tight. Striff like thát."

The Paper Tricks
But it seemed like with every

Scotch and soda the insults got louder. Finally Price whipped out a pencil, borrowed a piece of paper, and drew a picture of the heckler. It wasn't a complimentary one. The audience howled, and the heckler left. "Now, I've got a stack of paper that's part of my act," Price says. "Sometimes I draw a blank face. Sometimes it's worse than that." But it always shuts 'em up.

Madison's theatrical season will get an early start tonight when at 8:15, the Parkway theater curtain goes up on "Burlesque." Bert Lahr, stage and screen star, will have the leading role, with Rochelle Hudson of the movies in the chief supporting part.

The play was produced first back in the 20s, but in the last couple of seasons it has had successful New York and Chicago runs with Lahr in the part of "Skid," S the burlesque comedian whom drink pulls back from the the-atrical heights.

Lahr himself was a product of the burlesque circuits, where be went after a turn in vaudeville. Among others who climbed to the top from the burlesque stage and like Lahr, stayed there, have been Bobby Clark and Fanny Brice.

RADIO: Phil Baker's "Every-4:45 p. m. — Excursions in Science (WHA): "Glass Comes of body Wins" will be broadcast from Chicago on Sept. 10 and from Minneapolis Sept. 17. What does a playwright do when he isn't writing plays?
