3 Widows of Presidents Still Living By HASKIN

Questions and Answers Today's Smile

Q. Please name the widows of former Presidents who are still living. I. S. A. A. There are three living widows of former Presidents: Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Q. What crops are grown in New Zealand? F. B. O.
A. The soil of New Zealand is fertile and practically all Temperate Zone crops are grown there. Extensive grazing lands support large herds of cattle

Q. Had Longfellow a large number of books on Scandi-navia? S. P. A. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's Scandinavian library contained 380-odd volumes, including some rarities. He was considered an authority on Scandinavian literature.

Q. What is the greatest age attained by a hippopotamus? E. H.

A. The greatest age reached by a hippopotamus in captivity is 46. Betsy II of the Amsterdam Zoological Garden holds the record, having died in 1944 at the age of 46. A hippopotamus in the New York Zoological Park was 45 years old on July 13, 1948.

Q. Please tell something of the woman who occupied the papal chair. B. R. L.

No woman ever occupied A. No woman ever occupied the papal chair. A story was current for several centuries that a woman, Johannes Angli-ous, born in Germany of English parentage, at one time occupied the papal chair, between Leo IV, who died in 855, and Benedict III, who died in 858. Benedict III, who died in 858.
There is no known historical background for this tradition which was spread principally by a French Dominican monk in the 13th Century. It was first refuted by the French Calvinist, David Blondell, in 1647.

Q. What is the significance of the name of the town Wewanta, W. Va.? J. W.

A. The town of Wewanta, W. Va., was given this name when it applied to the Post Office Department for a post office. According to press reports, the department inquired as to the name which the community wished to have. The reply was that the name was not of im-KEFI-Telephone Hour.

In 1926, the talented gent with Arthur. the fore-and-aft collar produced a play called "Lulu Belle." It was written by Charles MacAr-thur in collaboration with the late Edward Sheldon, and it starred a memorable hunk of woman named Lenore Ulric, but it had a salable commodity known to the trade as "Sex." Soon after "Lulu Belle" opened, several Societies for the Suppression of Practically Every-thing began throwing rusty harpoons at it and demanding city fathers close it up. One prom-inent member of the puce pro-boscis set—a valoo I will mis-name B. Sidney Walton—took the lead in this badgering and, seeing as how votes are votes, it looked like a quick curtain for "Lulu."

And now for the flower and and now for the flower and itchy finger episode. Scene: The counter of a Brooklyn department store. Time: About 48 hours before B. Sidney Wal-E NEW Miss America—five feet nine inches tall—is not with a boxful of petitions incree to a fling at the movies, as Hollywood easting goes, Around noon that day, a dig-

Around noon that day, a dig-nified woman edged up to the flower counter, inspected a pur-ple-cloth poppy and decided she wanted it badly—but not badly enough to pay for it. As she was easing it into her handbag, a store detective introduced him-self and suggested a conference self and suggested a conference in the manager's office.

This pow-wow was a brief one. The manager agreed not to prosecute if the matron would sign a confession and submit to fingerprinting. The store, he explained, had adopted this sys-tem to avoid being sued for false arrest, and her confession would only be used if she were caught stealing a second time. The rich klepto signed with all 10 digits and swished out of the

Now it so happened that the manager's secretary, who had been present during the inter-view, was keeping company with view, was keeping company with a Brooklyn newspaper reporter named Charlie Samuels, and over a bowl of chop suey that night, she told him about l'affaire flower. "Seems I've heard the shoplifter's name before," she said. "It's Mrs. B. Sidney Walton"

"Thanks for a front-page story," said the reporter as he got up and started for a phone
