Answer to Question No. 1.

The main object of education is to teach students to want to acquire more knowledge and how to do it. The aim of and how to do it. The analysis of coucation is more education. Surveys by U. of Minnesota show few high school and college students ever want to acquire more knowledge. They have their line of husiness or learn their line of business or work but beyond that their so-cial, political and economic opinions; their knowledge of opinions; their knowledge of poetry, art, philosophy, history, etc., differ little from people with little schooling. They have "taken" their "courses" but the courses have not taken them. Answer to Question No. 2

Yes, because this would enable gifted children to marry two to 10 years earlier than now. This would result in one or two more children per couple. Since gifted people (and also their children) average better in health, good looks and moral character than people in general the nation and the world would beenfit. Answer to Question No. 3

Yes, according to Norman Lewis, author of "How to Speak Better English." He tried 100 test-sentences on 856 persons, of whom 849 missed "his genius (lay-laid) dormant"; $21 missed "Do you really think that Jules" "Do you really think that Jules speaks just like (I-me")? $19 missed "He has found a teacher (who-whom) he believes can handle the class!" 817 missed
