FRED ALLEN BRACES ROSE Old-hand Author Tells Novice What to Expect

By BILLY ROSE

A FEW minutes ago, the post-man handed me an over-sized envelope and suggested I open it under water because it was ticking. I held it under a faucet, until the flap came loose and was relieved to find it was only a letter from Fred Allen. deaf people who couldn't hear the fizzing. About this time, the moderafor and two critics on the panel will start a bitter argu-ment about the decline of the adverb in the Bronx, and by the time order is restored, the pro-gram will be off the air and,

DEAR BILLY: I have just finished reading your new book, "Wine, Women and Words," and I wonder if you, as a freshman author, realize what you're letting yourself in for. Years ago, when a fellow wrote a book, he withdrew to his musty garret, with simulat-ed calm, to await the verdict of the literary that assured him his royalties were starting to trickle in.

advero in the Bronz, and by the time order is restored, the pro-gram will be off the air and, you will be stuck with the four ad libs you had up your sleeve, for an' emergency. Television will hustle you next, and you will be seen on that exciting new video charade, "Battle of Books." Here, in an attempt to complete your story, you will tell how you decided to become an author when a waiter at Lindy's scribbled on the back of your check, "The essence of living is the power of appreciation, the savoring of thoughts and things." You will then relate a few anecdotes, quote George Bernard Shaw's priceless retort to the chitter-lings vendor, and toss off a few epigrams such as, "Humor is only a fragrance, a decoration," and "A dead moron takes up as much space as a dead genius." But as you pick up a copy of "Wine, Women and Words" to let the television audience see the price on the inside cover, the camera will switch to a man demonstrating mothballs, and an announcer will explain that program is sponsored by Moth-Wick, the perfumed mothball that causes your windbreaker to trickle in. But today, the writer who foals a tome is courting disas-ter. He is at the mercy of his agent, his publisher and his publisher's publicity staff, and to ballyhoo his work he is forced to lend his name to testimenials attend literary term testimonials, attend literary teas, make personal appearances on radio and television programs, and greet his scant public in store basements. As the author of "Wine, Women and Words," you will
