EXPERTS NOT EXPERT

Leaders of Last War Poor Prophets of Next

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK. (P) It is unlikely the next war—if there is one—will be fought as experts predict today. For there is no trusty crystal ball to give an honest preview of just how nations will beat each others brains apart a generation hence. Wars have as many surprises as women or the weather.

Top-ranking veterans of one war are often the poorest guessers on how the following war will be waged. They tend to overrate one new weapon too much. Or they rely too heavily on methods that won them victories in the past. It isn't only the French army

-as the old quip goes—that pre-pares in peace to fight the last war over again. All armies have a tendency to. The other day I picked up for five cents at a second-hand book stall a battered copy of "The Riddle of the Rhine," by Major Victor Lefebure. He was a British chemical warfare specialist in the first world war.

His book was published in 1923. It illustrates why seasoned military leaders should be chary of putting into print any predic-tions about the future of their own profession.

The book contained part of an article by Maj. Gen. Amos Alfred Fries, then chief of the U.S. Chemical Warfare Service, pointing out that poison gas caused 75,000 of the 275,000 American first world war casualties. Gen. Fries prophesied flativ:

"No other invention since that of gunpowder has made so profound a change in warfare as gas is making, or will make, in the future." But did it? Gas didn't play as profound a role in the second world war as Garand rifles, powdered eggs or the Red Cross doughnut girls.

The same book quotes an even more interesting statement by Gen. Debency, director of the French College of Warfare. This distinguished Gallic warrior had a theory that attacking aircraft could be brought down better by poison gas missiles than by con-tentional antiaircraft shells. Said he:

"It would be much more effective to create, for example, the g a sphere of poisoned air a mile rock. a sphere of poisoned at a miner round the airplane, instead of trying to hit the machine direc-ly with bits of the shell." I wonder how Gen. Debeney would feel if he re-read that to-day? He appearently didn't fore-day? He apparently didn't fore-see bombers with enclosed cockpits.

The high commanders of all allied armies after 1918 appear to have predicted future battles too much in terms of static trench warfare.

A young upstart French captain, Charles De Gaulle, found promotion slow after 1928, when he dared prophesy the doom of France unless it build longer range and more mobile tanks. Billy Mitchell met an rougher fate in the American army for championing airpower too robustly.

Answer to Question No. 3
No. Numerous studies by psychologists, including Rokeach, Allport, Kramer, Frenkel-Bruns
wik, Sanford, Levinson, Hartley and others, show that people

COLD COMFORT Very pleasant medical discoveries are those which label "harmless" something previously believed injurious. Such a as the report of Dr. Wallace Teed of Ann Arbor, Mich., that one afflicted with a cold may safely blow his nose without fear of spreading the infection to the inner ear. That adds more to comfort than the previous assurances that we may handle frogs without necessarily getting warts, or that high living needn't cause the gout. It gives us hope that in a few years sun-bathing will again be healthful. - Chicago Daily News.
