The other day, 1700 clubwom-en — 1700, count 'em — and I counted 'em — gathered at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor to hear lectures by three literary luminaries: Robert Sherwood, luminaries: Robert Sherwood, Hervey Allen and yours truly. I was there, not by mistake but by invitation, and I podiumed as I had never podiumed before because Eleanor was on the dais next to me. I figured of course next to me. I figured, of course, that she would be impressed by the commendable company I was keeping, and by the culture lovers who asked me after the meeting to autograph "Wine, Women and Words."

All the way home, my wife was silent — she seemed to be

Let's Explore Your Mind

By DR. A. E. WIGGAM

Prof. Gordon Allport of Harvard says this is the very first essential, for growing up into a successful, happy, influential personality. The neurotic can't do this. His mind is always a merry-go-round, with the merriment left out. Surveys show only half of high school and college students have any plans whatever for their future lives. Without a life plan, they will never become mature, self-confident human beings, row—the second mark.

Answer to Question No. 2

Yes, sex. I have spoken of this before, but one survey of 8000 young people revealed that nearly all differences and misunderstandings with parents go back to their lack of frank talks with them about sex. This survey showed if parents talk about sex openly, with no scolding or blame, even throwing in a bit of humor, they can win their children's love and confidence on all their problems in life. No. Ordinary mortals believe they can but scientists cannot. Indefinitely small things such as electrons don't follow the law of cause and effect worth a cent. Prof. Bridgeman, Harvard physicist, points out that a billiard ball moving at 1 foot a second, will at the end of 2 seconds, be 2 feet away. But an electron may be a foot behind the starting point or several feet in front. It's all quite technical, but you just can't tell which way them darn electrons jump.

Let me put the matter bluntly, gentlemen. Around the office, we're big stuff. When we yell into the inter-com, clerks rush in and call us "Mister"; when we bark out orders the way Edward does in the movies, even Arnold does in the movies, even our secretaries are impressed. our secretaries are impressed. But when we get home and close the front door behind us, we turn from big shot to bird shot. The Captain of Industry be-comes Hector, the Helpless Hus-band. Take me, for instance. When I write a column these days, it's only another maneuver in the losing battle to get a little respect around the house—to make my missus regard me as some-thing other than a smallish boy who's not overly bright. And it's my theory that husbands have been in the same leaky boat for centuries — that Caesar con-quered Omnia Gallia because he quered Omma Gama because he was trying to convince his lady that he was something more than a cute kid who was always tripping over his toga; that Napoleon said to Josephine, "Look, Honey, if I knock off Russia, will you let me nick out my own will you let me pick out my own neckties?"

What we need, gentlemen, is organization, solidarity, an Iron Curtain against the Interna-tional Bobby-Pin Set. And if we can't win the respect at home that we rate, at least we can hold underground meetings and admire each other. We can take turns changing washers in fau-cets, sharpen knives and fix
