Automatic Sniffer Helps Spot Drunks

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. - (U.P.) City policemen who have sniffed thousands of alcoholic breaths in line of duty are going to get relief from the unpleasant task with a scientific machine designed by two Yale professors.

The alcoholometer will replace he "tell by smell" routine now used by police in suspected cases of drunkenness. The machine measures alcoholic content with photo-electric cells.

he told newsmen:
"When this job is done, I'm There is only on
