Answer to Question No. 2

Yes, at least there will be far more high school and college graduates. According to Metropolitan Life statisticians, in 1940 there were almost as many men in college as were in high school in 1900—and seven times as many high school students. In 1940 one out of four persons was a high school graduate. In 1947 a high school graduate. In 1947 one out of three.

MEW YORK. An Everybody has a secret ambition—except me.

Mine is no secret. It's just plain unlikely.

My ambition is to be the "10 mostest" or the "10 bestest" of something. Just for a year, mother, just for a year. Just what I am picked as the "10 mostest" or the "10 bestest" of —well, I don't care. I just want to be recognized.

Medd on the Lord's green footstool—my piece got printed.

Well, as writers sometimes say when they don't know what to say next—the rest is history. Picking lists of the "10 best this" or the "10 out that crane."

"What? The up this poor little dog to that great big crane?
It's impossible."
"That's all right, lady," leered the foreman. "We have whips."

And I became the first man in American newspaper history to reach the rank of a specialist in this field of reporting. For one reason or another—and I'd just as soon not learn the reason—the editor always threw these handouts to my desk. Often, he wadded them up in a ball before throwing them—adding injury to insult. "He was a soldier," answered

Insult.

It was thus I reached the peak in this fast-paced, nerve-tingling game. I became known as "the 10 best" editor. I wrote 'em all—from the 10 best marble players since Adam to the 10 Siamese persisted.
"Cause I saw a picture of him

And then, as frustrated ambition fed upon itself:

"To heck with just being one of 10 on any single list. Why not sweep the boards? Why not be all 10, and leave a name mankind will remember forever?"

I can't say I've made an inch of progress. But I have found out my most dangerous rival. It's Dwight D. Eisenhower.

In 1948 Gen. Ike was picked by the National Laugh Week Foundation as the "man with the most virile laugh." The Institute for the Study and Development of Male Magnetism chose him as one of "the nine most magnetic men in America." And, at year-WHEN all thy mercies, O my God,
