What is to become of them when they are too old for school?

The girls will be easy prey for predatory men. The boys, unable to do anything but the simplest of common labor, will desire much they cannot earn. If they attempt a short-cut to riches, they will be caught quickly and thereafter have little chance to go straight. All alike are doomed to lives of hardship, want, envy. All alike, if they live long enough, will be wards of charity.

It is a problem that cannot be solved easily, but to ignore it is indecent and wicked.

Mare the eyes of deer stationary or can they be moved?

O. B. T.

A. The Fish and Wildlife Service says that deer can and do move their eyes, although the range of movement is not great. This is due to the fact that the eyes of deer are prominent and have a wide range of vision, so that everything can be seen without much movement of the eye.

75:30-KFI- The first public per-formance of Elizabeth Firestone's new musical composition will be the hilite of tonight's "Voice of Firestone." This talented com-poser will play her own work accompanied by the orchestra.

6:00-KNX-Portraying their or-iginal screen roles Rosalind Rus-sell and Sidney Greenstreet will give us that play within a play "The Velvet Touch" on "Lux Radio Theater."

8:00-KECA—Cene Kelley and Lucielle Norman relate in song the humorous adventures of the principals in Victor Herbert's be-loved "Red Mill." This is a pleasant revival by the Railroad Hour.

8:30-KHJ-Dr. Watson needs all his powers and wits to save his own throat when "The Knife of Vengeance" descends in tonight's Sherlock Holmes thriller.

9:00-KECA—"The Berlin Story" is the long awaited timely document portraying the situation in Germany and based on the thesis that the key of peace or war is a Rhur-Berlin axis.

The average New Yorker is pretty much a homebody. He can't afford many sorties a year into the plush-covered booby traps that lure the eager out-of-town butter-and-egg man.

And anyway he often can en-town butter-and-egg man.

And, anyway, he often can enjoy a better show by staying at home. It is the show put on by his neighbors. And neighbors do it for free. It is true that in this crowded island many families may dwell in the same building for years in the same building for years without ever getting on speaking terms. But nowhere in the world are adjoining families on better listening terms. This is unavoidable, as the walls that separate apartments are sliced as thin as restaurant ham.

Here live the most wonderful screwball neighbors outside of bedlam. And the most wonderful neighbors of all are those bedlam. And the most wonderful neighbors of all are those you'll find in Greenwich Village. Perhaps that is why one out of every four people who look for an apartment in New York try to find it in the Village.

Q. What insect is the most numerous? P. G. A.

A. Ants are the most numerous, the insect is the most numerous, the insect is the most numerous, the insect is the most numerous of the insect is the most numerous of the insect is the insect in the insect is the most observed in the most observed i Often I get homesick for the Village, where I dwelt for 10 happy years. Before I was mar-ried they were scratching years, too. Some of the scratching was to earn a living. And some of it was caused by bugs. The bugs came from the apartment below, inhabited by a dear old lady. Every time I called in an exterminator to clean out my apartment, I also sent him down to call on the dear old lady. But she always refused to let him in. She had a kindly belief that it was wrong of man to destroy life of any kind. In time I moved —and left her, victorious with her tiny friends.

And the horse-playing janitor who took out a $1000 life insurance policy on the Village's leading unemployed drunk. Is the drunk still waxing fatter and the janitor's purse leaner? That's the way it was when I left. Whatever became of the hungry young poet who played the zither in his room and trapped mice in the halls? That longshoreman in the back apart-ment who bounced his wife off the walls—has his ship come in? And the impressionable young Wall Street stenographer who ran screaming down the stairs that night Orson Welles broadcast a landing by men from Mars: What panies her now?

It's much more sedate in our 14-story brick tenement by the East River, I miss the noisy days in the Village. But neighbors are usually interesting anywhere here. A Chinese family from the United Nations lives below us, and I live in hope that sometime they will shatter their utter quiet with the music of a temple gong.

Overhead the prospect is more promising. Up there is a la with a pretty, energetic, black-haired girl of seven. She's a good friend of mine, and doesn't mind if I sometimes call her "Little Baby Thunderfoot," as well as "Queen of all the Butterflies."

Last year she studied ballet dancing. Guess what "Little Baby Thunderfoot" is taking up

Neither. Parents should begin loosening the child's apronstrings the day it is born. Yes probably. Most criminals have dropped out of school before the eighth grade. About half of them have not gone beyond the sixth grade and about one-third not beyond the fourth grade.
