United Press Hollywood Correspondent HOLLYWOOD — Accordionist Dick Contino charged today that Horace Heidt turned him into a "slave laborer" with a contract full of legal "does and don'ts"—mostly "don'ts."

Contino filed suit in superior court asking the judge to let him out of his contract with the bandleader. He said he's missed out of his contract with the bandleader. He said he's missed out of movie, radio, and television jobs because Heidt refused to let him make music for anybody else.

PIANISTS: Better teacher.

PIANISTS: Betty Hunter, who teaches piano at the Madison Vocational school, recently made a survey of her evening class to learn what the members do in working hours. Among the students she found 11 stenographers, five nurses, four housewives, five clerks, three teachers, three bookkeepers, two students, three cosmetologists, one waitress, one dishwasher, one pharmacist, one groofreader, one railway repair proofreader, one railway repair for anybody else until the court man, and one picture framer.
