Answer to Question No. 2

That was 10 years ago.

The first year little George Jr. arrived. His parents thought it was psychologically bad for him to grow up an only child.
So at the end of the third year of their marriage the twins arrived — Mable and Melba. And then along came tiny Grace

Shortly after the birth of the triplets they got a postcard from their old professor:

twins and not to the other. The B1 twin did no better than the other on mental tests. Psyother on mental tests. Psychologist Melvin Marx could find no improvement in learning ability of rats fed with B1. "Don't you think you two had better come back for a post-graduate course?" Both George and Grace thought his academic joke was in distinct bad taste. They no longer were worried over world population problems. They were too busy solving the posterity problems at home.

And they are doing all right Seems we'll just have to go back to plain hard work to improve our minds.

Answer to Question No. 3 No, in the fields of science or in any field where investigation is possible that may uncover new knowledge and deeper truth.
