ice Cream for Breakfast

learn that a campaign has been organized to boost ice cream as breakfast food. A widespread effort will be made, for instance, to have ice cream served with cereals. This frozen attack on the American breakfast table might, of course, be received with equanimity in July, or even in a Florida winter. But we feel rather certain that in Maine and Vermont, on mornings when the thermometer is chasing zero, no one will gladly spoon down a helping of ice cream before beginning operations on pancakes and sausage.

On Vermont breakfast tables a slab of cold mince pie, of course, has long been a sturdy touch of morning and a sample of pantry temperature. And such glacial pies appeared in Massachusetts even before tran-scendentalism and baked bears fed body and soul in Concord. But if New England's cold mince pic is to meet added cold, if cornmeal mush and the adaptable ready-to-eat cereals are to be served a la mode, the land- Post-Dispatch.

It's too late. The 5-cent cigar is back; but this isn't the same country.

REMEMBER the common tank last of the airlief over the elements. Let it be hoped that in time their magnificent achievement, which has gained the diplomats a breathing spell, can be Average American: One found in the front of the bus, the back of the church and strictly in the middle as a taxpayer.

wide scale — inflation, that is, such as has swept Europe and Chits.

Well, the airlift is still going strong. With landing aids, it is carrying as much tonnage as ever. Only the other day it completed 60,000 flights, on which half a million tons of supplies had been carried to the block-laded city.
