Q. Do all oranges have the same number of segments? H.

A. There is no fixed number of segments in an orange. Different varieties vary in the number of segments and even the same variety may vary in in-dividual oranges.

Q. By whom was the idea of seceding from Great Britain first suggested to the American colonists? L. S.

A. The colonists were first urged to secede by Thomas Paine in "Common Sense," a thin paper-bound book published in Philadelphia in January, 1776. In it Paine pointed out the advantages of independence. Though the book had a tremendous sale (300,000 copies in a population of less than 3,000,000), Paine accepted no money from it, but turned his royalties over to the revolutionary cause.

Q. Does a horse ever breathe through its mouth? W. F. C. A. A horse does not breathe through its mouth under normal conditions. This is due, in part, to the formation of the mouth and throat. The average length of the soft palate of the Equidae is five or six inches and in mouth breathing would be drawn into the pharynx.

THOUGHTS

So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.

AS LONG as we work on God's line, He will aid us. When we attempt to work on our own lines, He rebukes us with failure.—T. L. Cuyler.

The Affamished Poet THE LEAGUE TO SUPPORT and the winner got his poems

POETRY, after 12 years of published in a book. Finding epic struggle, has given up its that it would take a modern altruistic and lyric ghost. This multi-Maecenas to keep such ais sad news, but not surprising. For poetry, of course, is as difficult to support as a poet— and the poet is too often a droop-ing vine of tender flowers, needing a patron for a lattice. Al-though the poet, as Shelley de-clared, is much like a chameleon in his capacity to live on light and air (poets have been known to live four weeks on April and the South Wind), the essential nourishment a poet needs, as the bard of cloud and skylark also averred, is "love and fame." This, of course, is everlastingly true. The poet is affamished to get his words in print. In this natural urge he is confronted by natural obstacles—most of them human. It was Macaulay, for instance, who said that no one can "enjoy poetry without a certain unsoundness of mind." And our sked the postmaster to put a stamp upside down on his letter. "What is the klea?" asked the P. M. "I am taking a correspondence course," said the boy, "and that is our college yell."

age, of course, prides itself on its anity. The poet's market, then, is perhaps a declining one. However this may be, it was to answer the poet's essential need of seeing himself in print that the League to Support Poetry labored assiduously. It published a quarterly of poetry. It ran a prize contest every year
