clude other millions spent for skating sundries—such as short skirts, special shoes, iodine and gauze bandages. Rink owners claim that today roller skating is the nation's number one participation sport -with 17,000,000 enthusiasts. It is nice to know that this many fellow countrymen are going around in circles on purpose. Roller skating itself, however, developed rather accidentally. The sport was started early in the 18th Century by an unknown Hollander, a lover of ice skating. One summer, unwilling to wait until the canals froze over, he nailed some crude wooden spools to strips of wood attached to his shoes. And off he bumped along the roads of Holland, startling innocent peasants. In the next century the sport In the next century the sport spread slowly through England, France and Germany. In the late 1860's a gentleman named James L. Plimpton organized the first successful American rink. Skating became a world-wide health fad. It was being done in the best families.

a world-wide health fad. It was being done in the best families. Wrote one disciple:

"As Howe's sewing machine is industrial plants, or to our industrial plants, or Morse's telegraph to commercial pursuits, so Plimpton's system of exercise is to the social and physical wants of society."

But the fad soon collapsed.

The rinks were run too much on the level of the poolrooms of that day. You know—too many leering moustaches around. A good girl just didn't feel safe.

Since then the roller skating industry—like the skaters themreau of Labor says that in 1939 the average income per family of salaried and wage carning persons was $1389. Steak was then 60.65 cents per pound. In 1947, the average income was $3010 and steak was only about $1.$1.05. Sadly enough, many people have not shared this increase in income, but also very many people can buy more with their incomes now than in 1939. There are holes in this argu-ment but it's worthy of some thought.

Answer to Question No. 2 Yes, partially at least, Psychologist Henry Bowman points out that during a marionette show the figures grow larger and larger, because all but the small stage is dark and there is nothing to compare them with. When, in the end, the lights on, the operator looks gigantic. For the moment the perspective has been lost and per-ception distorted. So with marriage. Some little irritation may like the marionettes, loom out of all proportion. Keep your perspective and don't let the little irritations obscure the really big things of life and love. Answer to Question No. 3

Yes. Dr. George E. Gardner of Harvard is quoted as saying. the child has two main drivesthe sex instinct, which makes him love people, and the aggres-sive drive that makes him want sive drive that makes him want to harm—even kill them. He usually outgrows the tormenting, killing drive and becomes a normal boy. But if the killing drive killer. Sound psychology,
