to the report that Doris Duke has made plans to marry Jay Sims, the MGM newsreel commentator.

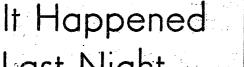

I caught up with Sims at Billy Reed's Little Club.

Sims—a fallish, slim-fig-ured fellow of 38—is in a paradoxical position if you know what I mean, and I doubt it.

ing about somebody else.

But—because he's been frequently in the company of Doris Duke since he happened to meet her in Cincinnati in December — HE'S making news. It's hard to get used to. He suggested that I "forget the story," then realized that is just what he wouldn't do if he were on the other side.

Young women tell me they consider Sims quite handsome, with far more than average masculine appeal. He wears dark-tinted glasses (not for glamour, for weak eys). He's an accom-plished conversationlist.

(By Earl Wilson)

It becomes my journalistic duty to tell you there's no truth

I have this from one who feels he knows-Mr. Sims himself.

He has always been talk-ing about somebody else.

I asked him: "Are there any marriage plans?" "I guarantee marriage is not contemplated," he said. "We're just good friends."

He took a pre-legal course at the University of Pitts-
