Reg. U. S. Por. Off. Et 1949 by John F. Dille Co. Answer to Question No. 1

Apparently yes. At least Psychologist T. E. Coffin matched the views of 137 TV families with those of 137 non-TVs. The TV families spent 24 per cent less time in pleasures and activities outside the home than the non-TVs. TVs spent 20 per cent less time at the movies and used their radios 26 per cent less during the day and 68 per cent less at night. Attendance at ball games, fights and races decreased less than any other rations. Since family outside recreations. Since families are going to stay home more evenings, what effect will TV have on the youngsters' private love-making?

Edith's divorced husband was nice to everybody at the party except her. She says she just except her. She says she just sat there feelin' that she was still his wife.

Answer to Question No. 2

Yes, by the Thematic Apper-ceptance Test (TAT) used by psychologists for exploring peopie's minds. They snow you all bunch of pictures, then you tell the story they suggest. As related by Pierre Berton in MacLeans, Science Research, Inc., find that all executives tell about the same type of stories. These stories reveal successful These stories reveal successful executives have 11 special qualities, chiefly, passion for achievement, can take as well as give orders, have immense "drive," have up-and-coming personalities, are afraid of failure, etc. Answer to Question No. 3

Yes. At least I think Sociolo-gists Watson, Reed and Posman pointed it out months ago. They listened in on 1001 conversations among all sorts of people. Poliamong all sorts of people. Following says mentioned only 36 times, then casually. The U. N. not once! The psychologists concluded most people, if asked their opinions on politics and given several choices, would least a put though any many any given several check one without having any check one without having any special interest or knowledge one way or the other. But this did not measure the intensity of their opinions. Until this is measured for each individual these students predicted in advance of the election that politi-
