(The first of what the Madison Art Assn. hopes will be a series of exhibitions of "serious and competent" Madison artists is now on view at the Madison Free library. The current showing displays the work of Dean Meeker and Donald Anderson. The association contemplates another such exhibition in October, according to Pres. R. E. Langer.)

dating back to 1940, examples are included which bring down to rhe present fime knowledge of trus vigorous painter's work. A seeming wide gulf exists between the darkly glowing oils of the earlier period and the airy, wind-blown lightness of his present watercolor endeavor. Einding the several styles together, however, imbuing all his work is the artist's keen all his work is the artist's keen feeling for design and organization.

Perhaps the outstanding example of his early period is "Music Store" a starkly colored egg tempera painting on a simple store-front theme. Neither the rich textures nor the strong tonal quality of this painting hide the decorative elements which are strongly characteristic of Anderson's present work. Only a gavealigraphy has been recently added which helps him toss his forms.

"Enchanted Woods' is a writhing, beautifully textured little water color of tree forms with piquant little foxes enurening the wellcolor of tree forms with piquant little foxes enuvening the well-ordered scene. "Monona Boats" and "Boys with Kites" are also gratifyingly vivid expressions. In "Boy Swinging" (as in one or two other paintings), the fine emotional swirt and bandsome color spatter are marred by a mannered handling of the figure, which brings off a sense of the "chie" befitting commercial advertising rather than the good solid run of Anderson's sincere work.

Anderson's sincere work.

Dean Meeker's contributions, like Anderson's, contain a good deal of experimentation. Concerned with a subjective world mostly of his own contriving, Meeker employs symbolistic devices both borrowed and original to create the fantastic settings on to create the fantastic settings on which he is currently lavishing his talents.

These talents appear, however, at their best in his large, justly prize-awarded encaustic "Backstage". Here, with minimum strain for the unusual, he has thrown together a welter of backstage paraphernalia; flats, spiral staircase, painted scenery, and masks. These he has organized into an integrated whole. With his melted wax-pigment technique, he has fused his colors into luscious areas.

There is much evidence of the satisfying results Anderson achieves in this late vein. One of the best of these is "German Cathedral".
