ALAN-"I don't mind being on a jury, your honor, but I won't be locked up in a room alone with 10 men." THREE GRINDSTONES APIECE

But Man, Alas, Has Only One Nose for Abrasion

man, has three grind-

They chafe him more as he grows older, less sure of himself and less innocent. They rub him deeper as he turns to the patterns of an unhappy past to guide him toward what he hopes is a fairer future.

The three grindstones of life. common to all men, are those of duty, doubt and desire:

of duty, doubt and desire:

1. A man's growing sense of responsibility as he takes over the duties of maturity.

(He knows, if he is a rug salesman, that he can't make a salesman and the can't make a salesman and the salesman a down payment on his boy's col-lege education—the boy who is never to suffer as he did-unless he can sell an off-color green carpet to a lady who wanted an off-blue color, but

(All his life he wanted to be promoted to a certain job. Now promoted to a certain job. Now that he has it he is uncertain and doesn't know what to do with it. He is tired. The boss he complained about is no longer there. He is on top and has nobody to blame but himself. He feels the fresher, younger manuach him is trained to get his under him is trying to get his job. And he doubts in his heart

3. The third grindstone is man's inextinguishable desire to kick up his heels at any age in any climate—and have fun.

But there are always people a man knows who are watching take his place, men who want the prestige of position but who
