No. You learn languages with your brains not your blood. There is no evidence that the Germans who are a mixture of many races, have any more brains than other European races. In fact, the differences in brain power of the various world races are very slight. There are probably more differences in temperament than intelligence but how much these are due to environment is not clear. The brutality of the German of the contraction of the contra tatue every day going to work. mans and Japs was apparently due to the influence of a few
