Few people knew what an incredible effort of body and mind it took for Ernie Pyle to do the job he did in war. He weighed only 113 pounds and he suffered from anemia.

He wrote truly about himself:
"Our soldiers still can hate, or glorify, or be glad, with true emotion. For them death has a pang, and victory a sweet scent. But for me war has become a flat, black depression without highlights, a revulsion
