Wisconsin Students' UN Conference Slated
Students from nine state colleges, four Madison high schools and five University of Wisconsin organizations will attend the third annual Wisconsin students' United Nations (UN) conference to be held in the capitol Friday, Saturday and Sunday.
The first general assembly will convene at 1:30 p. m. Friday.
Harold Cooper, member of the British Colonial service and resident in Nigeria, husband of the former Elizabeth Brooks Montgomery, Madison, will be the conference's keynote speaker.

Board of Regents Argument Ties Up Senate for Hour
The state senate was tied up for an hour Wednesday while legislators argued about adding three farm and three labor representatives to the University of Wisconsin board of regents.
But they couldn't take any action on the bill when one of the senators turned out to be absent.

Bill Doudna's SPOTLIGHT University Artists
Out of approximately 250 works being shown in Washington, D. C., in the "National Exhibition of Prints," 17 are by University of Wisconsin students—a great percentage in view of the fact that...

gave Bohrod an opportunity to develop what he considers to be his main interest, that of the American landscape. Bohrod thinks that his style at present has a leaning toward the commonplace and away from the elaborate.
The show, open from May 1 to Aug. 1, is held in the Library of Congress and is conducted by that branch of the government under the Pennell Fund, established by Joseph Pennell to encourage artists.
University students whose work was accepted for showing are: Parnell Bach, Alan Bushnell, John Colt, Jack Jones, George O'Connell, Louis Saloutos, Ginnette Whales, and Alice Von Neumann, all of Madison; Elaine Christenson, Barron; Frank Lind and Conrad Panfil, Milwaukee; Clifford McCarthy and Tony Arbischi, Rockford, Ill.; Robert Knipshild, Freeport, Ill.; Edward Merrill, West Allis, and Neil Meyer, Kohler.
All are enrolled in art education or applied art.
BOHRD—Paintings done by Aaron Bohrod since he arrived in Madison in 1948 to become university artist-in-residence will be shown in the Memorial Union main gallery beginning Thursday. The show will end May 24. Members of the Madison Art Assn. and their guests will view the paintings and attend a reception for the artist and Mrs. Bohrod before the association's annual meeting Thursday night.
A sketch of Bohrod's life and career comes from the Wisconsin Union gallery committee, sponsor of the exhibition:
"Bohrd was born in Chicago in 1907 the son of a grocer and first decided to take up an occupation while attending junior college. To get his art training he attended the Chicago Art Institute, financing the venture by selling score cards in the Chicago ball parks. After two years at the institute he went to New York where he studied under John Sloan at the Art Students League. After his schooling he returned to Chicago to become art director of a large department store. The work was lucrative but also limited in its opportunity for artistic expression so he quit and returned to serious painting.
"Works of rising young artists weren't in demand, however, and Bohrod had to supplement his income by working in a restaurant wiping dishes. In 1932 he got a break when some of his paintings were purchased at the Open Air Art fair held in Chicago's Grant park. Top price paid for any of Bohrod's paintings was $5 but the important thing is that some of his patrons came back for more.
"The Grant park show was the beginning of his reputation and he went on to New York where he had an entry in the International Color show. No one bought the painting but art experts took note of it and before long he had exhibitions in various museums along the east coast.
"When the war came Bohrod accompanied an art unit to do sketches of the Pacific war. The unit broke up when it lost its financial support but Life magazine was sufficiently impressed by his work to send him to Europe to get his impressions of the European war. He painted scenes of the Normandy beach head and went with the 3rd Army into Germany.
"Being in Wisconsin should

Singer Ken Carson has penned a new tune, "There's Only One Way To Fall in Love." It will be waxed soon by Cowboy Tex Williams.
Elliott (Frankie Remley) Lewis expects work this week that he will be back in his home town, New York, during June with the Phil Harris show, now lining up vaudeville dates for a three-week tour.
According to Hollywood rumors, Chet Lauck and Norris Goff will be doing one "Lum and Abner" video show a month starting in the fall—in addition to their Sunday CBS series.
AUTHENTIC N A M E: The "Double-Daters" mixed here with Wayne King and now on CBS' "Make Way for Youth," are just that. They actually double-date—and the girls are sporting diamonds, gifts of the boys.
RADIO INSTITUTE: The University of Wisconsin radio station, WHA, will serve as a training ground for classroom courses and actual broadcasting operations during an eight-week radio institute, June 24 to Aug. 19. Prof. Harold B. McCarty, director of radio education and of WHA and WHA-FM, has announced.
McCarty said that radio writing, announcing, acting, production, and directing are included in the courses, together with studies of radio as a social force and training in the techniques of classroom use of radio.
From time to time, visiting professional radio workers of "prominence and distinction" will supplement instruction by University faculty members and staff specialists. The studies and facilities of WHA will be the scene of much of the training, and instruction will be woven into regular broadcast operations.
ONE CENTURY TOO LATE MONTEREY, Calif.—(U.P.)—An unidentified man came to the office of the Monterey Peninsula Herald to see where he could get the "bargain" cattle he saw advertised in the paper. He was disappointed to learn the "advertisement" was in one of those 100-years-ago-today columns.
