But we hate to item about pictures that are far in the offing. So many times, schedules are changed. Titles are changed so often that ye olde public gets confused. That kind of news, according to our voluminous mail, is strictly on the dull side and anyway, who cares what star is going to make what picture months from now? We've is going to make what picture months from now? We've learned that readers not only enjoy, but are avid for personality stuff and intimate first-hand news about their favorities. Not dreamed-up publicity stories, but anything pertaining to their comings and goings, their personal life, their clothes, their homes, the way they enteral life, their clothes, their homes, the way they entertain, etc. And we aim to stick more closely to this type of "information," We don't have to ask, "What do YOU think about it?" Your many letters have answered the question long since.

The massive music of Gustav Mahler's second symphony closed the University of Wisconsin's Centennial Music festival Friday night with an awe-inspiring burst of sound. Under the direction of Prof. Richard C. Church, the University Symphony orchestra, the University bands, and the University choruses united in the last two movements of the "Resurrection" theater, with 11 choruses competsymphony, giving a performance ing for two trophies. One will go that even Mahler devotees must to the best women's group, the Mahler work, as there are about most of his compositions, which the average concert-goer tinds hard listening. And admittedly there are weak spots in the writing. But the over-all effect is one of gigantic genius, of complex sonority, of soul-filling music.

Under Church's leadership, the students produced a memorable musical achievement. It is exciting to think that college students would even tackle such a composition; it is even more exciting to find them doing it with the quality of workmanship they showed Friday night.

The two movements chosen if he worders and Phi Mu Alpha, professional music sorority, and Phi Mu Alpha, professional music strain professional music sorority, and Phi Mu Alpha, professional music sorority, and Phi Mu Alpha, professional music strain professional music sorority.
