Planes Now Make Bumpless Landings

AKRON, O. -(U.P)- Plane pilots always have strived to make smooth, bumpless landings.

Now more and more air jockeys are coming in for cushion landings, but they credit new engineering developments along with their own flying proficiency for the easier set downs. In some cases they are "almost too smooth."

Take the U. S. navy's new 92
Deckneed engineers working with technical men of the B. F. Goodrich Co., who devised a new landing geer using eight tandem twin wheels equipped with prevotation tires.

Small flaps of rubber on the sides of these "rotovane" tires get them revolving at high speed before the *plane touches the ground. That takes most of the until a special flashing signal on the instrument panel lights up.

Elimination of the tell-tale landing bump was accomplished by Lockheed engineers working with technical men of the B. F.
