"Georgie" was smart enough to know that a bold general spends men's lives to save other men's lives. He hated foxholes because he really believed that digging in was wasted energy, that in attacking again and again lay success and fewer losses.

And when the Army needed a tough man to do a tough job, there was "Georgie," tough enough to order one man to his death to keep two other men alive. And that was the cour-age he had—a courage above military politics.
Well, to him, to die in battle

Answer to Question No. 3 No, only about half as long. President C. H. Greenwalt of the Goods have gone up immensely but wages have gone up more. Says President Greenwalt, if you were content to purchase the same amount of goods today as then you would have to work about half as many hours. By working one hour you now can buy nearly twice as much goods as then. The change is mostly in our psychology. We want more less work is about the psychological story.
