NEW YORK, AP) So you're coming to visit New York this summer for the first time?

And your siling rich uncle dies.

The best things in New York—its wonderful window displays, its famous streets, its great stores, its history-crowded museums, its skyscrapers, its tremendous views cost little or nothing to see. And the people, the fabulous, fabulous people of this fabulous city, they are the best show of all—and free.

But there is a time to see things best. Go at the right time for each.

Go out to Coney Island on a Go out to Coney Island on a steaming Sunday and see humanity on the half shell. That is still the New York that O. Henry wrote about. And so is the Bowery and Chinatown—and the edge of Greenwich Village. It's best to see them at night, and the subway will take you to any of those places for you to any of those places for a dime. But let's start at the begin-

But let's start at the beginning. When you get off your train or bus, treat yourself to a cab ride to your hotel. If you don't know a good, clean, reasonably-priced one, ask the hackle. Unless you give him the idea you're just in from Fort Knox, Ky., he'll steer you straight.

Even though your budget is tight you can still work it so that you eat at least once in a

MECA-The Rosevating that you can at least once in a MNZ-Beat the Clock. big-name restaurant, see a Broad-MNZ-Everybedy's Way play and take in a fine concert. Timing is important in these things, too.

Go to the restaurant at lunch. The prices are usually scaled lower at midday—and you are just as likely to see a celebrity then. Hit the theater boxoffices half an hour before curtain time. At all except the top musicals or "Death of a Salesman" you'll probably be able to a pair of tickets. "A pick up a pair of tickets.
