Bugs in the Outdoor Music Circuit

By EARL WILSON

One would think—if one didn't keep hep by reading Earl Wilson's column—that "summer opera" is just awfully sweet. But the sad, stark fact is that certain insects are associated with summer opera, and we do not refer to the company manager and the music critics. We refer to moths, beetles, and plain old flics. Very few people would ever guess, for example, that Patrice Munsel, the Met's delightful 24year-old coloratura soprano, who was signed to a $120,000, three-year contract when she was 18 actually achieved the dramatic peak of her career when a fly flew into her mouth in Salt Lake City Right into Trap

"A fly flew into my flytrap." Miss Munsel said.

"He stayed and stayed in my mouth while I had it open singshe told me. "I waited and ing," she told me. "I waited and waited for him to come out, and I thought he never would. "But finally he left. Maybe the vibrations blew him out." "And what would have happen-ed if he hadn't left? What would you have done?" I asked, notebook poised for the answer. "Swallowed, probably," she said

-gulping at the thought I gulped uncomfortably myself, thinking of swallowing a fly for art's sake. But Miss Munsel said there were still other insects.

"It was in Monroe, Ia., a few weeks ago, on a very stifling night. that the beetles came," she said. They had to open the doors to let in some air. "The beetles came in, and they crawled on my head and shoul ders. I was literally crawling with beetles.

Miss Munsel nevertheless insists that summer concerts are just won-derful, especially as long as she's in them. She is afraid, as all artists are, that one night the beetle, the fly or the moth, will knock her out of the box and make her break in the middle of a song. So far no fly, moth or beetle has succeeded in doing that: however, there was the time in San Anton-io "The concert, hall." she said, "is wills: "Make way for Perfec-tion." and the reliant of the box of the reliant of the said and the reliant of the said the reliant of the said and the reliant of the said the reliant of the said and the reliant of the said the reliant of the said and the reliant of the said the reliant of the reliant of the said the reliant of the reliant of the reliant of the said the reliant of the reliant of

A letter from Joseph Steele, the best public relations man that Ingrid Bergman (or anybody) ever had, who is in Italy with her after a very tardy SO.S. call from the ady to join her. He writes that when they were filming on Stromboli the final work was done at the edge of a belching volcanic crater; days were deadly hot. In-grid, plus most of the troupe, climbed three precipitous miles up the steep slopes each morning at 3! Work started at 6 and lasted till mid-afternoon. Joe doesn't say word about Rosselini-and what we want to know is, What did Bergman do? Carry him?

The confusion for tans of Jose Ferrer and Mel Ferrer, both zoom-ing in Hollywood, is going to be lightly nectic from here on in. Mel has become the "pet project" of Howard Hughes-who has signd him both as actor and director; and Jose has more offers and assignments to take, when he finishes "Whirlpool" with Gene Tier-ney than he can handle. One of 'em is certain though. He'll play the part of "Lepke" Buchalter, who went to the electric chair via Mayor Bill O'Dwyer's work as the then district attorney. Jose Ferrer, who made his big movie hit as the Daphin in "Joan of Arc," will do "Murder. Inc." with a Brooklyn accent! It's Dennis O'Keefe who will
