New Type Video Station Tests Higher Wave Bands

A NEW ultra-high-frequency experimental television station, which is expected to have a vital effect on the future of all television broadcasting in the United States, has been put in operation by the National Broadcasting Co. in the Bridgeport, Conn., area.

Completion of the experimental station was announced by Joseph H. McConnell, president of NBC, who said it was a major step by the industry toward solving the broadcast and reception problems of ultra-high frequency telecasting.

"We are confident that the operation of this u. h. f. station will demonstrate the feasibility of broadcasting in the upper reaches of the spectrum," McConnell said. "The experiments are being conducted by NBC to unravel the complex problems confronting the industry in the present space jogg-jam for television channels. If the experiment is successful it will show the way to opening up vast new areas for hundreds of additional television outlets in this country."

A product of years of research and scientific pioneering by NBC and its parent company, the Radio Corporation of America, the Bridgeport experimental transmitting equipment was built by the engineering products department of the RCA-Victor division, under the direction of V. E. Troutant, to solve the many problems of ultra-high frequency transmission and home reception of television signals.

This is a continuation of investigation of ultra-high frequency television, commenced several years ago under the direction of Dr. C. B. Wolfe, executive vice president in charge of the R. C. A. laboratories.

The entire project, McConnell announced, is being conducted under the direction of O. E. Hanson, NBC vice president and chief engineer.

With the industry watching the development of the station closely, the experiment u. h. f. outlet will operate as a "satellite" to NBC's pioneer New York television station WNBC and will transmit the programs and test patterns of that station.

Myrna Loy, Mate Agree to Divorce

HOLLYWOOD. (AP) Myrna Loy, the screen's "perfect wife," will shed her third husband.

She said yesterday that she talked by phone with writer-producer Gene Markey in London. She decided to make the announcement after the conversation and commented:

"We're both regretful. We had hoped this would last. But it hasn't worked out."

She and Markey were married in 1946 with Adm. William Halsey as best man. She previously had been married to Producer Arthur Hornblow Jr. and John Hertz Jr.

Partner's Pushing Steals Bid of 4 Diamonds Doubled

BRIDGE players come from every walk of life. Today's hand is one I received from Frank E. Lyons down in Kingston, Jamaica. Mr. Lyons is very active in bridge down there and each year a group of players comes up to the States to participate in the national tournaments.

Lyons thought my readers would be interested in this hand, which came up recently in a rubber game. He was sitting in the North and after overcalling West's club bid with a diamond, he said his partner decided to do a little pushing. They ended up in the right spot. If the opponents had gone to four hearts or four spades they would have gone down.

Lyons made his four-diamond contract in the following manner: On the opening lead of the ten of clubs the deuce was played. West winning with the king. He returned the seven of clubs which declarer won with the queen. He cashed the ace and king of diamonds.

Then the seven of diamonds was led and won in dummy with the queen, which picked up the outstanding trump. He led the five of clubs and trumped in his own hand with the ten of diamonds.

His next play of the queen of spades was won by West with the

MARRIED 57 YEARS
Meet Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Scott
1129 Chestnut Ave., Long Beach

Celebrating their 57th Wedding Anniversary, Mr. Scott says, "We've been happily married for 57 years, but 9 years out of the 57 we have been steady customers of Parks Service Stations. Mrs. Scott and I saved our Parks profit-sharing premium coupons and, as a result, we have practically furnished our kitchen with electrical appliances. Parks gasoline has always given fine performance in our car and I'll say their service can't be beat."
