

TIP O' THE MORNING: Anybody want a 750-pound rag doll? The 15-foot doll used by Ralph Edwards in connection with the March of Dimes was supposed to go on tour, but proved too unwieldy. If you have an idea for doing something useful with it, let us know and we'll tell Edwards.

Some of the legendary figures of modern music—Duke Ellington, Johnny Hodges, Sonny Greer—played for two small Parkway audiences Thursday night, and convinced most of their listeners that the legend is solidly based and will live.

With these men were some musicians of high caliber who, if the Madison audience is right, will be long remembered, too.

Among them were Lawrence Brown, trombonist; Nelson Williams, trumpeter; Albert Hibbler, vocalist; and a couple of Hodges' co-workers in the reed section of whose names I am not sure.

Ellington's piano work, particularly when his quiet efficiency contrasted with the high-powered brass, was a delight, and his friendly manner of presentation was a factor in the variety concert's success.

It helped to offset the somewhat erratic progress and lighting of the first half, which needed the polish and showmanship of the second portion.

Ellington's piano was a constant factor in the success of the band's numbers, which were highlighted at intervals with the solo work of Hodges, Al Killian, Brown, Wendell Marshall, and others.

Vocalists with the 16-piece (including Ellington) orchestra were Al Hibbler, who stopped the show cold; Lu Elliot, formerly with Benny Carter, and Kay Davis.

Streetcar Crushes Man in Downtown Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP)—One man was killed and another injured in a freak accident at a downtown Milwaukee intersection Thursday. The men, Jerome C. Meyers, 50, and Steve Holantunder, 55, were standing on a safety island between a streetcar and a truck, waiting for a bus.

The streetcar made a left turn. As it did, it's back end swung across the island, pinning the man against the truck. Meyers was killed and Holantunder was hospitalized in a semi-conscious condition.

Atomic Calendar Fixes Date of Mummy Casket
CHICAGO (U.P.)—Two University of Chicago scientists, using an "atomic calendar," have come within a century or two of fixing the age of an Egyptian mummy's casket.

In Science magazine, Prof. Willard F. Libby and J. R. Arnold, a research associate, revealed that atomic know-how led them to the finding that the casket was about 4,750 years old.

They said they merely measured the radioactivity of the carbon remaining in the casket on the principle that radioactivity declines with age at a known rate.

Their results, they said, tallied with others obtained with samples of fir wood from Arizona, bits of the floor from an ancient Syrian palace and other relics. They were close to those gained by archaeologists using older methods.
