Undies Career Barometer, Claudette Colbert Claims

HOLLYWOOD. (UP) Claudette Colbert said today you can always tell how her career's going by the kind of underwear she has on. "My lingerie is sort of a barometer," the dark-eyed movie belle explained. "For different kinds of roles I wear different kinds of underthings."

Next on Miss Colbert's schedule is the part of an actress in 20th Century Fox's "All About Eve." And for those rough-and-ready roles she has been known to wear leather panties. That's what she says. "It was for the movie, 'Three Miss Colbert' says it's a 'Black Came Home.'"

L. A. Bridge Expert Tells of 'Suicide Squeeze' Play

An old friend of mine, Morgan Howard of Los Angeles, Calif., was in New York the other day. Howard was president of the American Contract Bridge League in 1942. He is the donor of the cup which is played for each year in the President's Cup game at the nationals. At one time he was also very active in bridge in Pittsburgh, Pa.

At lunch, we started to talk about bridge hands we had played together. This led to a discussion of squeeze plays, and in particular, the suicide squeeze. A squeeze play is employed quite often to make an extra trick or two. Generally, you have to have a long, established suit to have it work. But in the suicide squeeze you make one opponent squeeze his partner for the extra trick.

West's opening lead was the seven of diamonds. East put on the queen and declarer won the trick with the king. Declarer played the three of spades and when West's singleton king dropped, the trick was won with the ace. Now the queen and jack of spades were cashed.

At this point declarer could count only eight tricks, so he decided to let the opponents do the squeezing. He led a small diamond. East played the eight. Declarer played the nine and West won the trick with the 10-spot. On the three good diamonds East discarded three clubs.

West now led the queen of clubs and East had to let go his nine of spades. Declarer won the trick with the king and cashed the ace of clubs. East now was hopelessly squeezed. If he let go a heart, declarer's hearts would all be good; while if he discarded the 10 of spades, declarer's eight of spades would be good.

Losing Job, Man Cuts in on Broadcast

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 27. (UP) American Broadcasting Co. officials said today an engineer about to be fired broke 20 radio ethics when he took 20 seconds to broadcast gripes about his boss.

Listeners tuned into a sports program over station KECA Saturday night were startled by a voice that broke in and said: "We interrupt this broadcast to bring you a special announcement."

The speaker accused the station of hiring engineers on a six-month provisional basis and then firing them. He was cut off the air by the master control engineer.
