The end play employed by the declarer to make the contract of six no-trump on today's hand was important because it was one of the big swing hands of the tournament. If he had taken the diamond finesse he would have lost the contract.

Schenken (North) took inven-tory before playing to the first trick. He could count five spade ricks, possibly four heart one diamond and one club. Where was he going to get the 12th trick? Of course, if West held the king of diarnonds, the diamond finesse would give him the extra trick; but if it failed, the contract would be defeated.

Schenken decided to play the hand without the diamond finesse. He went up with the queen of clubs in dummy to kill West's king. In other words, he had to start to plan his end play on the first trick.
