Long Song Title No Handicap to Sale

Long titles are supposed to be anathema in show business. But for Don Lee Television's new star and singing pianist Matt Dennis, his latest song's serpentine handle literally worked won-ders: He sold it to the Edwin H. Morris Co., on its first playing.— and that by fortuitous accident Written for NEA Service

At both tables the bidding was much the same, and in both cases the opening lead was the king of the cases the opening lead was the king of the cases the opening lead was the king of the cases to the cases the opening lead was the king of the cases the opening lead was the king of the cases to the trump problem, the trump problem at the cases the opening lead was the king of the contract.

In the second room, the declarer saw that a single finesse in hearts might not be enough to solve the trump problem. He also saw that he was not really at his Encore stand.

Matt's friend, Les Clark, wrote the lyric a month ago and had been after Matt to put it to music. One early evening, 10 min-much the same, and in both cases the opening lead was the king of clubs. Both declarers naturally ruffed the opening lead. From there on the play was different.

In the first room, declarer was a man who liked finesses. Hence he led a diamond at the second he led a diamond at the second he led a diamond at the second fines are up dummy's ace-queen, so he returned a club. South ruffed and drew the last trump.

At this point ail South had to do was set up dummy's long spades. He therefore led the ten. West played low, hoping that his partner had the queen or that declarer would put up dummy's and get to dummy with the ace of hearts at the second trick! Matt'r remembered and dashed off an accompanying ditty. That that same night he played it at the Encore for the first time—and that same night Edwin H. Morris himself was present and bought it on sight—or is it sound? Matt's recording company, Coral, has also had him disc it.

West played low, hoping that his partner had the queen or that declarer would put up dummy's ace. The hand was one that really sic. One early evening, 10 min-utes before leaving his home
