TIP O' THE MORNING: If the Yankees approve the deal, Dizzy Dean will go on the air as a hillbilly singer. He's now doing sports comment.

An active, exhilarating season ended Sunday night for the Pro Arte quartet. In its 1949-50 Madison concert, the University of Wisconsin group had given us, in addition to music by masters of the past, a Schoenberg series unique in American musical history.

The National Board of Review called it "best picture of the year" and its DeSica "best director of the year," and the New York Film Critics circle labelled it "best foreign film of the year."

THE BADGER BEAT: Hildergarde will do a half-hour show on British television. A Johnny Olsen fan took a telephone poll in Fresno, Calif., calling 200 numbers at random. Of those with radios turned on, 98 were listening to Johnny.

Dvorak can be counted upon for an unusual beginning, in this work, he started with what was virtually a cello solo with piano accompaniment.

Despite a stellar performance, the quintet was vaguely unsatisfying. Mrs. Lockwood's handling of rapid passages was almost breath-taking and the quartet members gave thoroughly satisfactory accounts of themselves.

The music was filled with hints of half-familiar tunes in a setting of contrasting light and shade. Yet it left one feeling that there was much lustre and little body. Rather than saying farewell to a season, the Beethoven B-flat major quartet (Opus 18, No. 6) gave a greeting to one.

The first movement was a joyous exuberant; the second, a love song with an air of pleading. The scherzo was full of fun, and Rudolf Kolisch's violin made the most of it.

The last movement, marked "La Malinconia," began with a sombre adagio, then turned to a graceful, singing allegretto in which the adagio reappeared, only to leave again for a happier ending.

For this work, the quartet received the heartiest applause of the season. It was earned.

On the Screen: Vittorio DeSica's "Bicycle Thief," which won a special Academy Award this spring, will open Tuesday, May 22, at the Capitol theater.

Refugee Doctor Called to Treat Rare Disease

SOMERSET, Wis.—(UP)—A German refugee doctor will fly here Wednesday to treat two boys, bedridden by a rare disease that shrinks the leg muscles. The Somerset Lions club asked Dr. Max Gerson, New York, to come here after hearing the doctor had successfully treated an Austin, Minn., dentist's son who had the same muscular dystrophy.

Billy Besau, 13, has been bedridden since he was 3 years old, and his 10-year-old brother, Wally, has been afflicted with the disease for four years, according to Lions club member Lynn Delisle. Delisle said Dr. Gerson is a blood specialist who treated victims of the disease with diet and medicine.

Dr. Gerson is scheduled to land at Wold-Chamberlain airport, Minneapolis, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, where he will be met by a Lions club delegation and driven here.

Eau Claire Girl Wins Disabled Essay Contest Betsy Ann Barland, 16, Eau Claire, is the winner of a statewide essay contest on the hiring of disabled persons, the governor's committee on employment of the handicapped said Monday.

Miss Barland, a junior at Eau Claire High school, will receive a $50 dollar savings bond and her essay will be entered in the national contest. She will receive her prize from Gov. Rennebohm and Committee Chairman Harry Lippart today at 3 p.m. in the state capitol.

Other winners are second prize, Byron Lewis, Barrington, Little Wolf, $20; and fourth prize James Smith, McDonnell Memorial High school, Chippewa Falls, $17.50.

to get the film treatment a La Jolson, but without Larry Parks. Gene Autry and Dinah Shore recorded two hymns for Columbia. Sigmund Romberg is credited with writing more than 2,000 musical compositions. They say that one is played every few minutes somewhere in the world.

CLEFS: Eden "Nature Boy" Ahbez has just completed "Guitar Totin' Cowboy." Irving Berlin will probably do a musical version of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" after he completes "Call Me Madame."

Dick Rodgers celebrating 25 years in Tin Pan alley. To escape the press while resting, Frank Sinatra calls himself "Francis Savage."

In September, 1930, papers reported Bing Crosby's marriage like this: "Dixie Lee Marries Band Singer." Phil Regan says that he hasn't had to sing for pay since the fall, thanks to his oil wells. "Los Angeles 5 P.M." is the title of a new MGM film starring Mickey Rooney which will deal with the Dixieland band craze. Rooney will play a drummer.

Cole Porter's new musical will be titled "Out of This World." Buddy Rich has left Tommy Dorsey for the ninth time. Maurice Chevalier may be next.

The last movement, marked "La Malinconia," began with a sombre adagio, then turned to a graceful, singing allegretto in which the adagio reappeared, only to leave again for a happier ending.
