'Lou' Makes a 'Kill' Score on Play of Quiet Hand

By OSWALD JACOBY Written for N. E. A. Service has been aware that anything unusual has happened. A typical example is the hand shown today, which came up in a team-of-four match not long ago.

When the hand was played the first time, the declarer was a player known for his "scientific" methods of play. He took the opening diamond lead with dummy's ace, and speedily led four rounds of trumps. He next cashed his remaining tricks in diamonds and clubs. As he did so, he watched every discard, like a hawk, making all sorts of scientific deductions as he went along. You could practically hear the machinery whir in his head.
